

Even in times of relatively stable sea level, coast lines changed and humans had to adapt and to move settlements ...

About 8,000 years ago, Local Sea Level (LSL) became stable after a long phase of rapid variations.

Human settlements could move into the coastal zone.