
Over the last five decades, we have developed amazing engineering skills in coastal protection. We can maintain countries that are for a large part below current sea level.

We built new settlements in areas prone to flooding, particularly if the protections fail.

Today, we are building magnificent barriers ...